Rocky the Christmas Elf

Last Christmas, Santa needed a helper at the Northpole. One tiny elf said, "I can help with that Santa." "Ho! Ho! Ho! Yes! This is the perfect job for you," Santa said. Santa whispered into the elf's ear, "You need to go to this address... 1516 on Yellow Street. Their last name is the Greens."

Quickly, Rocky flew to the Greens house on his magical reindeer. Then the children and the mom and dad woke up. When they woke up they smelled a hint of Christmas. So they went searching. Then one of the kids found him. There was a note by him and it said, "I am a special elf here from the North Pole. Santa sent me to watch over you. I need a name." The children started to brainstorm some names. They thought of Elfy, Cristopher, and then they came up with "Rocky."

The next day, the kids went to school and the parents went to work. While they were at school and work, Rocky got into some mischief. He tried baking cookies in the kitchen. Rocky had dumped the flour all over the floor. This reminded him of snow. So he made snow angels everywhere in the kitchen. Then he found a marker ornament. He used his magic elf dust and sprinkled it on it. The magic elf dust made the marker a real marker to draw with. Next, he found something to write on. Rocky had found a mirror. He had left a note on the mirror. It had said, "Nine more days until Christmas." When he finished, Rocky got tired. So he went and found a place to take a nap. Rocky went in the Christmas tree. While he was snuggling in, he accidentally knocked down the Christmas star.

Later that day, when everybody got home, they found a mess on the floor in the kitchen. They were so excited to be home because it was their last day of school. They started Christmas break. After the excitement, they began to look for Rocky, but realized they didn't know where he was. The family went searching around the house. The dad found the Christmas star on the floor by the fireplace and found Rocky in the Christmas tree. The dad helped the little brother put the star back on the tree. When everyone was asleep, Rocky flew to another special place to watch the children tomorrow. The next morning everyone got to stay in bed and sleep in. They had pancakes, eggs, and bacon for breakfast, it was very good. After that they went to go play while mom and dad wrapped presents for them. Rocky watched for good behavior and gratefulness in the living room. They played with cars, dolls, and the doll house. They had so much fun. It was time for bed they had a lot of fun today.

The next morning was Christmas Eve. The Green's were so excited and could hardly wait to open presents. But, this meant only two more days for Rocky because he would go back to the North Pole after Christmas. They had to go to bed early because Santa Clause was coming tonight. They were so excited for Santa to come to their house. Once Santa arrived, Rocky helped set up the presents under the tree. Santa and Rocky shared some milk and cookies. Santa told Rocky he was a great helper and was happy he was there. Rocky thought he should sleep in a small sleigh just like Santa's so he could watch the children open their presents. In the morning, the Green's woke up and found a lot of presents under the tree. They were so full of joy. They had gotten cars, dolls, clothes, and stuffed animals. They spent the day playing with all their new toys.

Rocky liked watching them open presents with thankfulness. Rocky felt happy and sad at the same time because it was almost time to leave. Rocky liked his time with the Green's, but he began to feel sad inside and missed his elf buddies. Tomorrow, it would be time to go back home. He realized that the job Santa gave him really was perfect for him.
